

that Martha welcomes Jesus and his disciples into her home and immediately goes to work to serve them. Hospitality is very important in the Middle East and Martha was fulfilling her duty in this respect.

Jesus' response to Martha is not unkind and it gives us an idea of his affection for her. He says that Martha is worried about many things that distract her from really being fully present to him. And that is what her sister Mary has chosen to do. This story also reminds us of the importance of being fully present to someone who has an important message to give us. We have so many distractions (not least from technology), so if some calls to see us, we should give them our full attention and really listen attentively to what they have to say.

Martha is, I think, easier to identify because we see ourselves in her. We are often worried and distracted by all we have to do in the world and forget to spend time with Jesus. It is, however, comforting to note that Jesus loved her just the same. So, let us pray to St Martha today that she will help us to find time for Jesus in the midst of our busy lives.

Our First Reading today also deserves a brief mention. You will be familiar with the work of Andrei Rublev (c.1360 - c.1430), the great Russian icon painter, and in particular with his 'Old Testament Trinity' which is described in the reading:

picturing the three angels welcomed by Abraham (Genesis 18), an icon which is often on display in this Church. Christians see this scene as a prefiguring of the Christian doctrine of the Trinity. This icon is also called 'Welcome to the Stranger'. Anyone praying with this icon for any length of time will feel that the invitation is somehow mutual: the three figures are inviting you to sit at table with them; you are invited into the life of God.

As was the case with Abraham in our reading today, we sometimes get to see unexpected "glimpses" of the transcendent which can also be part of our experience of God. This can be in nature when we are out for a walk in the countryside or on the beach or, of course, through people who "walk into" our lives sometimes in an unexpected way and perhaps give us a fresh insights with their encouragement and wisdom. Saint John Henry Newman described this quite well when he wrote: "The visible world is the veil of the world invisible."

As Thomas Merton reminds us, like Martha, "we all need enough silence and solitude in our lives to enable the deep inner voice of our true self to be heard at least occasionally." frustrated when her sister Mary disregards the rule of hospitality and Martha is left doing all the

I visited a modern Basilica in Montecatini in Italy a few years ago and noticed an unusual picture painted on the wall behind the tabernacle. On taking a closer look, I realised that it was a depiction of our Gospel reading today, with Jesus at the centre, Mary sitting on a chair attentively listening to him and Martha busy with her household duties. I thought it was significant that the designers of the church attached such significance to this Gospel that they gave it such a prominent place in their church. Perhaps they realised that the two sisters symbolise the contemplative and active dimensions of the Christian life, and the tensions between both, which is part of each one of our faith journeys.

This, as we all know, can be at times difficult to balance. It is easy to understand why Martha would be work. But Mary chose to sit and listen to Jesus. The delightful scene is only found in St. Luke's Gospel. But, as you know, the characters in the story appear elsewhere in the other Gospels. We are told in St. John's Gospel that "Jesus loved Martha and Mary and Lazarus." This unique statement which tells us of the special relationship Jesus had with Martha, her sister, and her brother. And, of course, we know that Jesus later raised Lazarus from the dead and he after attended a dinner with Jesus.

Jesus was a frequent guest at Martha's home in Bethany and he was clearly good friends of theirs. We read of three visits there in Luke 10:38-42, John 11:1-53, and John 12:1-9.

In our Gospel today, St Luke tells us

The Building Hope Prayer

Pilgrim God, we give you thanks and praise. You constantly journey with us even in our darkness and doubts. We seek your way of loving kindness to walk together as one family. Open our eyes to recognise you in the faces of one another, in the breaking of bread and in the splendour of creation. May the risen Christ sow seeds of hope and a new life deep within us. May our hearts and minds be filled with your Word, bringing forth truth, justice and peace. May the Holy Spirit working in and through us do much more than we dare to imagine As we live out our baptismal calling in humble and loving service. We make this prayer through Christ Our Lord. Amen

*Mary, Mother of the Church, pray for us. St. Laurence O'Toole, pray for us
St. Kevin, pray for us. St. Brigid, pray for us.*
